

2 Days to Worldwide Salvation

Roughly 1/3 of the world at least claims Christianity as their religious affiliation. The number who actually believe that Jesus earned the right for them to go to heaven by His death on the cross is unknowable, but we can be sure that it is many fewer.

At the same time, especially in this “information age,” it’s not uncommon for people to have friends and acquaintances all over the world.

So what would happen if you and every other Christian today told someone about Jesus, that He paid for their sins so they could live forever? Or because of the many who claim Christianity but don’t know Christ, having been taught that Christianity is about “being good,” what if you told two people today?

And what if those people who were told about Jesus and the salvation He gives were to believe and tell one or two more people? Should those people believe, then every person on earth would be on one-way road to heaven.

Of course, many who hear the Gospel, the good news of Jesus’ sacrifice in our place, will reject it. So, what if you told two people today and two more tomorrow? What if you kept asking around until you found a friend who would like to come with you to the service this Sunday?

The simple reality is that, would Christians, yourself included, share this good news proactively instead of waiting for someone to come up to you and ask you how to get to heaven, millions would be saved through the Holy Spirit working through God’s message.

Hundreds of people get this newsletter, many of whom do not attend services on a regular basis. If you're one of those who would be considered an "invitee," don't wait for an invitation. Many stay away because they're afraid of coming back after a long time and being condemned for their absence. To you, let me reassure you that the Christian church is all about forgiveness—that's why Jesus came. Consider this your invitation from me—we will be celebrating with the angels when you come.

And if you've had the opportunity to invite someone and haven't taken that opportunity, the same message applies to you: Jesus forgives you as well. That's why He came.
